Research Interests and Experience

Research interests

My research focuses on occupational mental health and psychological assessment within the field of industrial psychology. I am particularly interested in work engagement, burnout, psychological distress, and overall mental health among employees. In addition, I have research interests in broader mental health issues among young adults and other populations. I am also exploring topics in cognitive psychology to strengthen my theoretical and methodological foundations.

Research expertise and methods

I have experience in research design, data collection, and manuscript preparation for peer-reviewed publications.
